Warnings Issued Below Muskogee; Cow Creek Floods

Old Sol glared down through clear skies at mud-crust Oklahoma Sunday, and the weatherman promised the sunny weather would stay around for at least a day more.

However, flood warnings were issued for points along the Arkansas river in eastern Oklahoma, downstream from Muskogee, and forecasters saw a possibility of thundershowers in the Panhandle Monday night.

The fair weather blew in violently, so far as the southeastern tip of the state was concerned. As a cold front moved in to chase out thundershowers which have plagued the state for three weeks, a final line of storms hit the southeast corner.

Humidity Falls

Heaviest rainfall reports from there, however, were all less than 1/4 inch, and no tornado activity was reported.

Texoma Spillway Evacuation Started

As clear skies appeared over all of Oklahoma Sunday for the first time in a week, residents and industries downstream from brim-full Lake Texoma were moving out in anticipation of the lake's spilling over.

At 7 p.m. Sunday, last time an official measurement was made, the lake stood at 638.75 feet above sea level, just 15 inches short of the spillway. It was rising at the average rate of 1/4 inch an hour.

Col. John Bristor, Tulsa district engineer, predicted the lake would pour over its spillway sometime Monday night.

The lake has not gone over the spillway of the $65 millions Denison dam since it was built 13 years ago.

Flood gates will remain closed at Texoma "at least 24 additional hours," Bristor said.

"Continued serious flood conditions downstream make it imperative that we utilize the flood storage facilities of the Denison dam to the fullest," he declared.

Based on water already in the lake's watershed, Bristor said the lake should crest Wednesday at 641.5 feet, 18 inches above the spillway.

Earlier crest forecast was 645 feet.

and the Theakston Corporation—began evacuating their plants Sunday. They hoped to have the move completed before the water poured over the top Monday night.

Highway department crews, bolstered by the U. S. engineer corps, were working frantically to save approaches to Roosevelt bridge on U. S. 70 between Durant and Madill, which crosses an arm of Texoma.

The bridge itself was in no danger, engineers said, but the lake has risen above rock rip-rap protecting the approach fills, and wave action was eating out the dirt.

"We're dumping everything we can get our hands on over the side," Frank Fodge, Antlers division engineer at the scene directing operations, declared. "However, if the lake should crest at 645 feet, I don't think we have a chance to save the highway."

Huge trees were being flattened by bulldozers and pulled behind trucks to be dumped in the danger area. However, the highway was still open to traffic late Sunday.

Most resort areas around the lake, which was never expected to rise above 640 feet, were already under water Sunday. North

Water Chases 2100 Out of Their Homes In Parts of Dallas

DALLAS, May 26 (AP)—Southwest Texas took a pounding from thunderstorms late Sunday while the Dallas-Fort Worth area in north central Texas fought swirling waters left by earlier downpours.

The U. S. corps of engineers said the Fort Worth flood was more than twice as large in volume of water passed through the city as any previous flood in Fort Worth's history.

An estimated 4,000 persons fled their homes in the Fort Worth area during the weekend.

Drenching early morning rains across the Dallas watershed sent the Trinity river there rising Sunday. It crested at 41.7 feet at 7 p.m.

Review of World Problems Begun

WASHINGTON, May 26 (AP)—President Eisenhower and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer Sunday began a review of urgent world problems with Germany's role in any world disarmament plan undoubtedly a key issue.

Adenauer and other high German officials will confer here for several days.

Eisenhower and Adenauer began their talks at the president's farm at Gettysburg, Pa., and afterward flew together to Washington in one of the president's twin-engine planes.

The White House clamped a secrecy lid on the leisurely get-together at Gettysburg but it seemed certain that Germany's role in any world disarmament arrangement led the list of problems discussed.

Ike Escorts Visitor

Eisenhower personally escorted the 81-year-old German leader to Blair House where Adenauer will stay during his three days of conferences with top officials here.

"Thank you for coming to see me," said the president as he left Adenauer in front of the government's guest house opposite the White House. "It was a nice day."

The "nice day" Eisenhower mentioned featured a man-to-man talk between the two on the front porch of Eisenhower's Gettysburg farm. Only a translator was present most of the time.

German Views Important

In advance of the get-together, Eisenhower was reported ready to assure Adenauer that Germany's disarmament views will be fully sought for any, even a "first step," disarmament agreement with the Soviets.

Eisenhower was known to be especially anxious to make clear that the United States would never agree to any "demilitarized or neutralized" Germany as a price for Soviet concessions on an east-west disarmament package.

Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano who flew in from Germany shortly before, was standing on the steps of Blair House along with Ambassador Heiz Krekeler to greet Adenauer when he PORT AU PRINCE, May 26 (AP)—Daniel Fignole, a forceful young leader of Haiti's workers, was inaugurated provisional president Sunday thus averting civil war—at least for a few hours.

A crowd of 10,000 massed in the square around the presidential palace went wild at the swearing-in ceremony.

Workers and peasants took over the streets, rolling in the grass and in the dust in an ecstasy of joy. Hundreds fired shots into the air.

But the atmosphere remained explosive. Police stood at all street intersections, trigger fingers ready.

Vigilantes armed with clubs and stones roamed the city, halting all automobiles in a search for arms.

Americans Trapped

Two hundred American tourists, trapped in their hotels during 24 hours of wild shooting and artillery fire when civil war threatened, were trying to leave the country. All airline schedules to the Caribbean island were canceled.

Scores of Haitians were killed or wounded in the firing Saturday and Sunday, but it was impossible to establish any accurate count of casualties.

One of the provisional president's first acts was to accept the resignation of Brig. Gen. Leon Cantave, the army chief who had ruled Haiti since last Tuesday.

Civil War Threatened

A challenge to Cantave's command of the army by the Haiti police chief, Col. Pierre Armand, had threatened civil war in Haiti. In his resignation, Cantave said "bitter political passions" had culminated in the troops engaging in "fratricidal battle."

Both Cantave and Armand stood at Fignole's side as he was sworn in.

Col. Antonio Kehreau, commander of the southern military district, was named army chief in Cantave's place.

Fignole, a 43-year-old mathematics professor noted for his pile-driving oratory and somewhat leftist leanings, promised speedy "free and honest" elections.

Dictators Disliked

He declared his dislike of dictatorships and promised to establish law and order and preserve good relations with the United States.

10 Die, 25 Hurt In Earthquake

ISTANBUL, May 26 (AP)—A destructive earthquake shook a wide area southeast of Istanbul Sunday, killing 10 persons and injuring 25.

The shocks jarred tourist-crowded Istanbul and Ankara. But the main force was centered in Borlu province in northern Anatolia 100 miles from Istanbul.

All casualties were suffered in the area when the earth shook at 7:33 a.m. Three dead were found in a shattered resort hotel at the nearby village of Abanad. The deputy governor of the province said 80 percent of the houses and buildings in the stricken area, comprising 12,000 population, were damaged.

In Borlu City two minarets were knocked askew, several chimneys toppled and many buildings cracked and rendered unsafe.

The Turkish Red Crescent organization, equivalent of the Red Cross, immediately started relief supplies rolling to the area. Interior Minister Namik Gedik went to the scene.

In Istanbul three jolts were felt. Dishes jumped, windows banged and buildings seemed to sway but no damage was reported. It was the second serious quake to strike Turkey this stormy spring. A month ago tremors virtually destroyed the village of Fethiye on the Aegean sea coast, killing 15 persons.

Crowd at Soccer Game Is Panicked

PARIS, May 26 (AP)—A soccer crowd panicked Sunday when a pro-French Algerian leader was assassinated and spectators thought the bullets were aimed at President Rene Coty.

All Chekkal, 60, former vice-president of the now defunct Algerian assembly, was shot in the back in the midst of a huge throng pouring out of Colombes stadium after a soccer game. He died a few minutes after reaching a hospital.

Spectators still in the stands thought the shot had been aimed at the president, who had left minutes before. They surged toward the gate screaming.

Police quickly restored order.

Slayer Identified

Witnesses said the assassin fired at a close range as Chekkal was talking to friends. Onlookers beat him to the ground and police seized him. They identified him as a 27-year-old Moslem, Mohammed Sadok.

The shooting stunned the French government. Coty went to the hospital and spent several minutes at the death bed.

Chekkal was the highest-ranking Moslem personality attacked in the two-year history of Algerian fighting in France. The fights are a backwash of the 30-month-old rebellion in Algeria. Most of the attacks have been between rival groups of nationalists.

Friendship Advocated

Chekkal was elected in 1948 to the Algerian assembly — a largely advisory body — on tickets advocating a "French-Moslem union." The assembly, made up of both European and Moslem members, ceased to function because Moslems boycotted it, many after being threatened with death if they kept their seats.

A passionate advocate of French-Moslem friendship, Chekkal was the author of several appeals to Algerians. Last February he was a member of the French delegation when the Algerian question came before the United Nations general assembly. He appealed to Algerians to co-operate with France, claiming the "destiny of French Algeria is intimately tied to that of France, our only fatherland."

number of times, he declared. Behind trucks to be dumped in the lake's watershed, Bristol said the lake should crest Wednesday at 641.5 feet, 18 inches above the spillway.

Humidity Falls

Heaviest rainfall reports from there, however, were all less than 1/4 inch, and no tornado activity was reported.

Temperatures Sunday were in the mid-70s to low 80s, ranging from 78 at Oklahoma City to Tulsa's 83. Humidity was lower than it had been for some time, with a reading at Oklahoma City of only 33 percent, adding a spring-like tang to the day.

The weatherman said fair weather and mild temperatures would continue over the state through Monday, with a chance of scattered thundershowers in the Panhandle Monday night and a few widely scattered thundershowers over the state Tuesday.

In many sections of the state, though, residents were still mopping up Sunday after a week of high water.

Waurika Creek Floods

Some 200 persons were evacuated from their homes at Waurika early Sunday after Beaver and Cow creeks went out of their banks. Red cross disaster worker Dale Jones said about 100 families were being fed Sunday at two shelter centers on the town's main street.

A foot of water from the swollen Arkansas river washed over Moffett, near the Arkansas state line, and the last of 400 persons—the entire population—was evacuated Sunday night. Residents began pulling out Saturday.

Authorities at nearby Fort Chaffee, Ark., sent 10 army trucks and 40 soldiers to help in the evacuation. Moving van companies pooled their semi-trailer trucks for the operation.

The Red Cross set up food lines for the evacuees in Fort Smith.

At Arkhoma, a few miles south of Moffett, about 10 families reportedly were evacuated as the Poteau river backed up from the Arkansas overflow.

Veteran Policeman Collapses on Duty

Police Capt. Mark Bain was hospitalized early Sunday after collapsing on duty at the police station backing desk.

Attendants at Mercy hospital reported Bain was "feeling better and resting well" Sunday night. They said tests will be made Monday to determine the cause of the veteran policeman's collapse.

Based on water already in the lake's watershed, Bristol said the lake should crest Wednesday at 641.5 feet, 18 inches above the spillway.

Earlier crest forecast was 643 feet.

Youth Is Shot Fleeing Police

A 16-year-old city youth was shot Sunday night as he fled from police near SW 29 and Robinson.

The shooting, police said, followed a fight in which scoutcar officer Bob Perdue was elbowed in the eye.

Perdue said he shot the youth, identified as Bob "Gabby" Hayes, when he refused to obey his commands to halt.

A .38 caliber bullet from Perdue's police revolver pierced the calf of Hayes' right leg, narrowly missing the bone. After being treated at St. Anthony hospital, Hayes was taken to the county juvenile ward and booked on suspicion of burglary.

Police had put on a pick-up order on Hayes for questioning in connection with the burglarizing of a Capitol Hill tavern earlier in the day.

Perdue said he and his partner, scoutcar officer Glen Richardson, spotted Hayes and a companion parked at a drive-in on S Robinson.

"We went over and asked Hayes his name," Perdue said, "and when he gave me a fictitious name I ordered him to get out of the car." (Hayes has a police record for burglary and can be recognized by most officers on sight.)

"He got out of the car," the scoutcar officer said, "and I told him to turn around so I could put on the handcuffs. When he put his hands together behind his back and I bent over to put on the cuffs, he brought up one elbow"

When by bulldozers and packed behind trucks to be dumped in the danger area. However, the highway was still open to traffic late Sunday.

Most resort areas around the lake, which was never expected to rise above 640 feet, were already under water Sunday. Normal elevation of the reservoir is 617 feet.

Aggie Alumni Honor Athlete

(Oklahoma Times Stillwater Bureau)

STILLWATER, May 26—Pole vaulter Jim Graham, winner of the Gustavus Kirby award for sportsmanship at the Olympic games, Sunday was named winner of the second annual "Aggie of the Year" award.

The award was presented the track star at Oklahoma A&M college's last reunion—next year the annual gathering of Aggie clans will be at Oklahoma State university, the school's new title which goes into effect soon.

The reunion was attended by some 400 Aggie grads of classes of the years ending in "2" and "7" and of 50 or more years ago stretching back to the mid-'90's.

Presented by the Alumni association, the award goes to the graduate or former student who brought most honor to the university, state or nation during the preceding year.

Graham voluntarily gave up his place on the U. S. Olympic team when he felt the recurrence of a leg injury would jeopardize points for the team at Melbourne. He stepped down in favor of Bob Gutowsky of Occidental who went on to capture second place in the world games.

In recognition of Graham's unselfish act for the U. S. team, American sportswriters voted him the Kirby award which he received in New York in January.

Graham received a plaque from the Alumni association and his name was added to the university's "Hall of Fame." Winner of the first "Aggie of the Year" award presented last year was

Washita Damages Two State Bridges

The state highway department Sunday reported several roads open, but several more were closed, as a result of Saturday's rains.

It crested at 41.7 feet at 7 p.m.

2,100 Flee Homes

Some 2,100 persons were chased from their homes, many for the third time this year.

The U. S. weather bureau said Laredo, Cotulla, San Angelo, Junction and San Antonio had thunderstorms late Sunday. This area was one of the worst hit by the drought.

Several highways were flooded in the San Angelo-Sonora area and the civil defense office said motorists should not go into the area unless it is an emergency because of the danger of flash floods.

Sonora had 3 1/4 inches of rain in half an hour. El Dorado had 3 in the same amount of time.

Water was lapping at the floor of a bridge on U. S. 180.

Officials at Fort Worth refused to try to estimate the damage.

Areas Patrolled

National guardsmen patrolled flooded areas to prevent looting.

The Trinity started falling at Dallas late Sunday.

One shelter held about 200 persons, calmly waiting out the waters.

At Elgin, Texas, 40 miles east of Austin in the south central portion of the state, 5.50 inches of rain fell Sunday sending more water into the already swollen Colorado river.

Fort Worth, where more than 4,000 persons fled their homes, had torrential rain during the night and Sunday morning. A tornado destroyed a barn in suburban Haltom City, and lightning set fire to an upholstery shop.

Dam Gates Closed

Three gates on Mansfield dam, 22 miles north of Austin, were closed to prevent flooding of the Colorado river between Austin and the Gulf of Mexico. Heavy rains fell there Sunday.

Elgin, with 5.50 inches received the most rain, while Austin got 2.50 inches during the night.

The dam is the main flood control facility on the river.

The 2,500 persons evacuated lived in south and southeast Dallas. It was the third time residents in some areas had been evacuated this year.

Many roads and streets remained closed in Dallas and Dallas county Sunday.

Residents Warned

The Red Cross disaster chairman for Dallas, John W. Mayo, said 148 persons were housed in the Red Cross shelter at Fair Park during the night. Others will be taken care of in private homes or in buildings at the park.

Police had warned residents Saturday of the possible flooding and many loaded their household goods into trucks and cars and waited for the word to evacuate.

Overflowing streams forced evacuation of homes in low-lying areas of Abilene, in West Texas.

At Grand Prairie between Fort Worth and Dallas, and a heavy rainstorm caused a flash-flood at Greenville in northeast Texas.

Funnels Sighted
Tornado funnels were sighted in central and north central Texas but apparently did no damage.

Some residents of the hard-hit Hillland Hills community of Fort Worth began clean-up operations as the flood water dropped in that area, but none moved back into their homes.

Water was still in homes in the "flood bend" area bordering the west fork of the Trinity river below Lake Worth dam northwest of Fort Worth.

Police said it would be two or three days before residents could begin moving back into the area.

Two of Fort Worth's four lakes dropped slightly and two rose slowly.

Showers and thunderstorms were forecast for much of Texas, but they were expected to be less severe than those of the past several days.

At Greenville, 80 miles northeast of Dallas, a heavy downpour sent Long branch and Town creek on quick rises. Many persons were trapped in their autos by the flash flood, and water entered several buildings.

National guard troops were called out to help in evacuating flood victims. Several families sought shelter in the Greenville courthouse, but returned to their homes after the water receded.

At Grand Prairie, about 40 residents were chased from their homes by the west fork of the Trinity.

Fog dropped visibility close to zero at some west Texas points. Abilene had one-eighth of a mile visibility, Midland one-fourth and Wichita Falls one mile.

Mrs. Henry Clay Eakin of Rotan and her 11-month-old granddaughter, Patricia Ann Beasley of Abilene, were killed when their car crashed into the side of a train at Hamlin. Mrs. Eakin's husband and the child's parents were injured. State highway patrolman Donald Roberts said the crash occurred in heavy fog.

Tony Butler, 5, of the Brock community near Weatherford, drowned when he toppled into Patterson creek near his home Saturday. Flood waters apparently had weakened a bridge on which he stood.

At Pauls Valley and Wynnewood the Washita ripped out bridge approaches, cutting U. S. 77 at both places, but little other damage was reported.

Webbers Falls Alarmed
In eastern Oklahoma, the Arkansas river was still on a rampage.

Webbers Falls was alerted for a 13-foot flood after the Arkansas crested at Muskogee nearly 3 1/2 feet out of its banks. Little damage was reported from Muskogee, however.

The Verdigris river was nearly 10 feet above flood stage Sunday at Inola, with little change expected in the next two days. The river was due to crest Sunday night at Claremore, five feet above flood stage of 38 feet.

At Tahlequah, the Illinois river was falling Sunday after a 17 1/2-foot crest Sunday morning. Flood stage there is 11 feet.

Only other streams reported out of their banks Sunday were Bird creek at Sperry, about nine feet above flood stage, and the Poteau river at Poteau, where water was 3 1/3 feet above flood level.

The Cimarron at Guthrie and Perkins crested near bankful Sunday.

Nearly all flood control lakes in Oklahoma were at near record elevations Sunday. The Arkansas river flooding was partially due to water releases from Pensacola dam, where engineers said the release was necessary. Thirty flood gates were opened at Fort Gibson dam to accommodate the incoming water.

Wister and Lake Heyburn were near spillway elevations, while Tenkiller was rising but still not filled.

Altus—Lugert lake, in southwestern Oklahoma, was reported within a foot of the top of the dam but was not rising, while Fort Supply, Canton, Great Salt Lake, and Hulah, were all at near record heights.

Can't the Chickens Swim?

DALLAS, May 26 (AP)—The last time Mrs. Louise Booker saw the chickens she and her husband raise near their south Dallas home, they were dead, floating in flood water that swirled around their frame house.

"My husband's just sick about losing them," she said. "I didn't know they couldn't swim."

Mrs. Booker, 40, was one of the hundreds of persons living at Fair Park who evacuated their homes because of floods.

Sitting near her, dressed in the same things she wore when taken from her home last night, was Mrs. Emily Burnett, 48.

She was worried about her refrigerator.

"Oh," she said, "I would hate for it to get ruined. I've been paying for it for three years and it's a real good one." She still owes $5 on it.

She said she and her 14-year-old daughter "just didn't have the power to lift it up with the other furniture."

"Oh, it's got a good motor," she said.

This is the third time Mrs. Booker and Mrs. Burnett have been forced from their homes by flood this year.

But they, like the other residents of south Dallas, do not plan to move.

"I'm buying my house so I can't move. And I like the place I live," said Mrs. Booker.

Mrs. Burnett said she can't move because her husband is ill and she lives in a house owned by her sister.

"She doesn't mind too much when we can't pay our rent," she said. Her husband does not work regularly.

In the first flood Mrs. Booker lost 48 chickens. She lost 17 small ones and 9 hens in the second. "And this one wiped us out," she said.

"I hope we get some more, though," she said. "We eat a lot of eggs and sell some."

Mayce Ross, a 34-year-old unmarried man, said he has had enough floods.

"I'm moving out. I haven't thought about where, but I'm getting tired of being flooded," he said.

He and others at Fair Park are being taken care of by the Red Cross.

The men spend much of their time playing dominoes. The women sit around and talk. They hope to be back in their homes Tuesday or Wednesday.

in this Negro republic probably a winner in any honest popular vote in Haiti's turbulent presidential campaign.

Fignole's inauguration was the solution agreed upon by five ill-assorted elements—his own supporters, the adherents of Dr. Francois Duvalier and Clement Jumelle, two of the 10 candidates for chief executive, and Cantave and Armand.

Civil war threatened to break out Saturday when Armand attempted to take over command of the army from Cantave.

The attitude of Dr. Louis DeJoie, another leading candidate, was still a question.

DeJoie, a wealthy planter and industrialist favored by Haiti's mulatto aristocracy, organized tight city-wide strikes and lock-outs which paralyzed the capital of 200,000 last week, in an effort to force Cantave to resign from military rule. He was reported to have fled to his country home after an attempt on his life by mobs. But this was discounted by informed sources.

DeJoie in a special message to the people urged them to be calm, but declared he would continue his fight for the presidency. It was known that he felt his chances had been injured and he was expected to make some fresh move.

Quintuplet Marie Receiving Radium Therapy; Party Off

MONTREAL, May 26 (AP)—Marie Dionne is receiving hospital radium treatments for an old leg condition, it was learned Sunday night.

A person close to the Dionne family who asked not to be identified said the treatments are for a sort of blood vessel tumor on the fleshy part of the leg.

The source emphasized that the condition is not serious.

As a result of her confinement, the four surviving Dionne quintuplets won't have a birthday party Tuesday.

In a dual balloting, Denison voted to accept Layne by 168-8 margin. A defeat at either poll would have killed the merger.

The Layne district has some 400 students and goes through the eighth grade, sending its high-school students to Denison.

Eisenhower doffed his Texas style grey fedora and climbed out of the back seat with Adenauer to bid his guest a temporary goodbye. A translator sat between the two men in the rear seat during the drive from the airport.

Adenauer arranged to meet with his top advisers Sunday night to prepare for the formal talks which open Monday morning at 10:30 a.m. with a conference with Secretary of State Dulles. No formal activities were planned for the evening.

After bringing Adenauer to the Blair House door, Eisenhower drove across the street to the White House.

When he greeted Adenauer at his Gettysburg farm, Eisenhower was dressed in a speckled gray sports jacket and gray slacks.

Adenauer, his formal black clothes contrasting sharply with Eisenhower's casual attire, posed solemnly for pictures with the president afterward. He then accompanied Eisenhower on a 45-minute tour of the chief executive's farm, listening attentively while Eisenhower talked about his prize cattle.
